IN THE HUDDLE

BY STEVE SNAPP

It hardly seems possible but it's that time of the year again. So welcome to Ohio Stadium and the start of another football season.

By all indications, Ohio State fans are in for another exciting year in 1977. Coach Woody Hayes has 15 regulars and 38 lettermen back from last year's 9-2-1 team that shared an unprecedented fifth consecutive Big Ten title and romped to a convincing 27-10 win over Colorado in the Orange Bowl. To go along with those talented holdovers, Woody and his staff have come up with a fine freshman class that will go a long way in helping to offset the loss of seven departed regulars.

"We should be a better football team than we were a year ago," advises Woody, who enters this fall with 222 victories during his illustrious 31-year career. "We will be more experienced offensively, and even though we lost some outstanding football players on defense, we expect to again be very solid."

Indeed, the offense will be more experienced. Last year at this time the Buckeye attack was undergoing a major overhaul with eight new starters. This time around only three replacements are needed. There were times last season when the young Buckeyes had their troubles getting untracked. That should not be a problem this year with eight veterans in the lineup.

The OSU experience should be especially apparent in the backfield, where quarterback Rod Gerald, tailback Jeff Logan and wingback Jim Harrell are starting their second year as regulars. The only new face is speedy Ron Springs and he can't really be considered a raw rookie since he played in all 12 games last year.

Up front, tackle Chris Ward, end Greg Storer, center Mark Lang and split end Herman Jones are all holdovers and newcomers Joe Robinson and Tim Vogler both have seen considerable combat. With Vogler moving in at center and Lang shifting to guard, it could be one of the best Buckeye lines in several seasons. Only guard Ken Fritz is untested.

Even though All-American end Bob Brudzinski, tackle Nick Buonamici and linebacker Ed Thompson have departed, the Buckeye defense should be strong.

To start with, middle guard Aaron Brown, tackle Eddie Beamon and safety Ray Griffin are in their third year as regulars; while linebacker Tom Cousineau, end Kelton Dansler, safety Joe Allegro and open side halfback Mike Guess are second-year starters.

Paul Ross, Byron Cato and Dave Adkins will take over for Brudzinski, Buonamici and Thompson, respectively, and while they are relatively green, they all have the necessary ability. Lenny Mills completes the starting lineup.

A LITTLE HELP FROM THEIR FRIEND — Ohio State's starting backfield of Jeff Logan (34), Rod Gerald (8), Ron Springs and Jim Harrell (11) huddle around All-America tackle Chris Ward. All four of the former know that in order to have good years they must again get excellent blocking from Ward and the rest of the offensive line.

So, Ohio State will put a veteran cast of performers on the field today against the University of Miami in the first meeting ever between the Buckeyes and the Hurricanes.

Miami, under the first-year direction of Lou Saban, will counter with a young but explosive team that has more than a fair share of good football players.

One of the best is quarterback Erasmus James Baker, better known as E.J. to his teammates. Baker, a 6-1, 160-pound junior, directed the Miami attack to an average of 324 yards a game last year, a Hurricane record. Another standout is Ottis Jerome (O.J. of course) Anderson, who rushed for 918 yards last year as a sophomore and is fast on his way to rewriting the Miami rushing records, many of which are held by Chuck Foreman.

Defensively, the Hurricanes return a pair of fine linebackers in Earl Monroe and Craig Cosden. Also back are standout tackle Don Smith and deep backs John Turner and Bryan Ferguson.

Evaluates Saban: "We are light in numbers and lack depth. We are going to have to depend on a lot of new men. However, if we stay healthy, I think we can give some creditable performances."

Saban and the Hurricanes are hoping for just such a performance today. The Buckeyes are hoping for anything but. But, then, that's what college football is all about.

Lightning Rod Ready to Strike

By Steve Snapp

Should Rod Gerald ever tire of playing football, he can always pursue a career as a magician. Indeed, players who have played against the elusive Ohio State quarterback must feel that Gerald is already part magic. How else can he move with such incredible quickness, seemingly disappearing right before a would-be tackler's eyes?

OSU quarterback coach George Chaump won't call it magic, but he readily agrees that Gerald's lightning-like quickness is something special.

"I wouldn't trade him for any quarterback in the country in terms of quickness," declared Chaump of his prized junior. "That kind of quickness just doesn't come along very often."

But quickness isn't Gerald's only attribute.

"He is fast on his way to becoming a complete quarterback," assesses Chaump. "Last year was his first as a starter and his inexperience was obvious much of the time. But he is a year older and wiser now, and it shows in everything that he does. He is improved in all areas."

"I think he is going to have a great year."

Gerald is also anticipating having nice things happen in 1977.

"I have a better understanding of our offense now and I am much more relaxed than I was as a sophomore," says the 6-1, 174-pound signal caller. "I think I tried too hard a lot of times last year and just didn't play very well. This year I hope to play more on instinct."

But don't think the former Dallas prep star is coming off a disappointing season. That would be a mistake. Despite missing four games due to a severe lower back injury, Rod finished the 1976 campaign as the Buckeyes' third leading rusher with 465 yards. He also scored seven touchdowns, including one in the Orange Bowl where he was named Most Valuable Offensive Back. It's just that Gerald is his own harshest critic.

"I need to develop more consistency," says the soft-spoken education major. "I'd play well for a stretch last year, then I would let down. This year I want to play at a more constant level."

Gerald especially hopes to have a more productive year passing. Inexperienced and bothered by a bursitis condition in his right shoulder and later by a dislocated finger on his throwing hand, he completed a meager thirty-five percent of his passes a year ago.

Rod Gerald

"Late in the season I was just throwing on a prayer," he says, admitting that as his completion percentage went down so did his self confidence. "But I was a good passer in high school and I think I will prove this year that I can throw the ball."

One of the reasons for Gerald's renewed belief in himself is an extensive summer conditioning program on the Nautilus weight machine.

"I am stronger now and I can get more on the ball whether it is a short pass or a long one," he says. "I also feel like I am more accurate now because of my added strength."

Adds Chaump, "Rod will throw better this year because he can read defenses much better than he could a year ago. There just is no substitute for that year of experience that he now has."

Rod Gerald's goal is to be the best quarterback he possibly can. This may be the year. If so, Ohio State fans can look forward to another exciting year of football, probably with a little magic thrown in.

HEAD COACH WOODY HAYES

Woody Hayes and football have become synonymous during the past three decades. So, too, have Woody Hayes and winning.

Hayes, now in his 27th year at Ohio State, is the fourth winningest coach in college football history with 222 victories in 31 seasons. Only Alonzo Stagg, Pop Warner and Bear Bryant have more triumphs than the 64-year old Hayes, who spent three years at Denison and two at Miami (O.) before taking over the Buckeyes in 1951.

Entering the 1977 season, Hayes had won 189, lost 54 and tied 9 at OSU for a winning percentage of .768. In Big Ten play he owns a 139-34-7 record and has captured 12 conference championships. No other conference school comes close to either figure during the past quarter of a century.

Currently Hayes, who has coached longer in the Big Ten than anyone except Stagg (41 years at Chicago) and Bob Zuppke (29 years at Illinois), is working on a string of five consecutive conference titles and an unprecedented five straight bowl appearances by the Buckeyes. A Big Ten crown in 1977 would make Ohio State the first team in conference history to win six consecutive championships.

Overall, Hayes, a native of New Philadelphia, O., has taken nine OSU teams to bowl games and produced national championship squads in 1954, 1957 and 1968. His 1969 squad, which posted a 9-1 mark is generally regarded as one of the finest college football teams ever assembled.

Since Woody has coached at Ohio State, the Buckeye school has led the nation in average home game attendance for 21 of the last 26 years and finished second the other five seasons. At the end of 1976, Ohio State owned a string of 50 consecutive home sellouts.

Hayes has spent his entire coaching career within the state of Ohio. After graduating from Denison in 1935, he accepted a position as assistant football coach at Mingo Junction where he remained until being named head coach at New Philadelphia in 1938. He won 19, lost 10 and tied one at New Philly before joining the Navy in 1941.

Following his discharge, Hayes returned to Denison to embark upon a collegiate coaching career. In the time since, he has become one of the most respected and most successful coaches the profession has ever known.

SHORT TAKES

A new rule in college football this season should really open up the passing game. Under the rules change voted by the NCAA Football Rules Committee, linemen can bust out and block downfield without worrying about becoming an ineligible receiver — providing that the pass receiver catches the ball at or behind the line of scrimmage. Dave Nelson, secretary of the rules committee, says, "This is the major change in the passing game since they changed the size of the ball (in 1934)." (That same year, the committee eliminated a 5-yard penalty for more than one incomplete pass in the same series of downs, and said the first pass in a series of downs could be incomplete in the end zone without loss of the ball . . . except on fourth down, of course! The passing game certainly is far advanced over '34.) Consider what the '77 rule means: On screen passes, guards and tackles can cut down linebackers and cornerbacks. They can do the same on rollout option plays, without worrying about forward laterals. In fact, the committee said its intent was to "make forward passes behind the line on option plays legal." It could help Veer and Wishbone teams more than others. Now their linemen can move out without penalty if the quarterback decides to throw a short pass to a trailing halfback, that is, as long as he catches it at or behind the line of scrimmage. It seems the new rule could give the offense an advantage over linebackers, who formerly could hold back until a pass was thrown. Now they'll have to avoid blockers while trying to decide what the quarterback plans to do. It's an added burden for the quarterback, though, to make certain he throws short if his linemen are downfield. And if the pass isn't complete, it must fall to the ground or otherwise become dead at or behind the line of scrimmage. Summing up, screen passes should be more effective and more popular with coaches this season.

* * * * *

An unusually high number of seven '76 consensus all-America players are returning in '77 — Notre Dame tight end Ken MacAfee, Ohio State tackle Chris Ward and Michigan guard Mark Donahue on offense and Notre Dame end Ross Browner, UCLA linebacker Jerry Robinson and Southern Cal safety Dennis Thurman on defense, plus Texas A&M kicker Tony Franklin. (Consensus based on AP, UPI, Coaches and Writers teams.) But only four others who made at least one first team (of the four above) are returning — Brigham Young quarterback Gifford Nielsen, Oklahoma State running back Terry Miller and two kickers — Texas' Russell Erxleben and Arkansas' Steve Little.

'Footballlese' . . . from A to Z

"Footballlese," that wonderful grid-iron jargon that can be so completely confusing even when broken into its simplest form, has become an ever-so-important part of our society's language.

It doesn't matter if you are one of the thousands who fill the mammoth sunken stadiums, the great coliseums, the huge horseshoes or the multitude of football fields merely ringed by bleachers. If you can't converse reasonably intelligently in this new tongue, you may be forced to watch your favorites in virtual silence.

Gone are the days, and ruefully so, when that sophisticated, self-proclaimed super star could impress his cute blind date with such mind-boggling grid terms as run, catch and throw, and then really score points with touchdown and safety.

Now, in all probability, this cute young lady will no longer ooh and aah and bellow forth with an ear splitting screech, "Oh, look how far he threw the ball."

Instead, she probably will make the casual observation, "With the defense playing a man-to-man coverage, I imagine the quarterback will call an audible at the line of scrimmage and try to pick up the first down with a buttonhook pass."

Have you ever watched two coaches become thoroughly engrossed in the discussion of football strategy? It matters not if only a tablecloth is handy, they eventually will start diagramming sure-fire plays.

But one point about footballlese: It has become the official language of all football fanatics and is not the one-man dialect— "Stengelese"—with which the witty, sometimes gruff, but always loveable Casey Stengel puzzled the baseball world a couple of decades ago.

And if you become perplexed in your attempt to decipher what Ol' Perfesser Casey was saying in many of his rambling dissertations, just take a book of football expressions to your next game and then sit back, observe the wildness and try to figure it out.

Of course, locale will have a minor bearing on the translation. For instance, throughout most of this football-crazy country Mike is understandably the middle linebacker on the defensive unit. Around Baton Rouge, La., however, those fiery Cajuns know only one Mike—the LSU Bengal tiger who unceasingly paces his home across the street from all that madness known as LSU football.

Dad, above all else, knows the term pocket. Some think it is the area of protection provided for the passer. Good ol' dad knows it is what he is constantly digging into just before his offspring make another of those seemingly endless journeys to the concession stand.

A reverse play is not necessarily a running play in which the backfield action suggests one direction and the runner goes the other. No sirree, it could be the carefully and quickly planned strategy by either part of a blind date to terminate the occasion.

If you are somewhat befuddled over "footballlese," which should now be as clear as any piece of opaque glass, do not despair. The future for you football lovers has all the prospects of getting worse. Just wait until we join the rest of the world in measurement, and your heroes are staging a late fourth quarter march for the winning touchdown and are suddenly faced with fourth and 1.828 meter situation. Now what?

Even more sobering will be the discovery that the cute little cheerleader you have been ogling through those high-powered field glasses (the wife thought they were to see the game better) has vital statistics which read 91.44 cm—60.96 cm—91.44 cm.

Oh well, maybe all this madness will run full cycle like so many other fads, and soon we can return to the simple run, throw and catch, with an occasional touchdown and tackle thrown in to impress some sweet, unknowing cutie.

Mike Wathen is taking computer science courses to round out his accounting education in the Administrative Science Honors Program. Another honors business student, Jerome Solove, expanded his education in finance and real estate with a year of study at the London School of Economics in England. Solove also has held two General Motors internships and scholarships, adding practical experience to his academic achievements.

Janet Nickerson has combined her interest in studio art and a position as artist at an excavation at Malyan, Iran, into a major in the art and archaeology of the Near East. She recorded the 5,000-year-old artifacts at the dig in Malyan during two trips to Iran and has had her drawings published in two magazines. She plans a senior honors thesis on one type of artifact found at Malyan and wants to teach art history after completing a graduate degree.

Meeting the honors challenge at OSU

"The willingness of a lot of faculty members to give extra time to bright students is the heart of an Honors Program," says Ohio State University

Honors Director Dr. C. Grey Austin.

That, plus support from administrators, alumni and donors, Dr. Austin says, has helped honors learning become a vital part of Ohio State.

Students who enter an Honors Program, by invitation or self-selection, work harder because they want to. As honors students, they find opportunities for designing individualized study contracts that center around their special interests while still providing a well-rounded college experience. Close contact with faculty is nurtured through small honors seminars and faculty-student rap sessions where, says one honors student, "It's sometimes hard to tell the students from the professors."

"There is here a well-developed and comprehensive set of opportunities for those students for whom the regular program would not be interesting or challenging enough," Dr. Austin said.

But self-fulfillment is just one reason students opt for an honors education. The emphasis on problem solving, self-education and communication skills is useful in any career. And honors graduates are better prepared to meet the stiff competition for graduate and professional schools.

"We do know that our honors students who go out from here do very, very well in graduate and professional schools in other places," Dr. Austin said. In fact, a survey of Arts and Sciences graduates since 1930 showed that, after Ohio State, the second most attended graduate school was Harvard.

The honors community at Ohio State includes honors floors in residence halls, an honors student lounge and extracurricular activities, such as the annual Renaissance Festival, coordinated through the Honors Community Association.

Ohio State also is headquarters for the National Collegiate Honors Council, of which Dr. Austin is executive secretary treasurer.

Dr. Austin says he is pleased with the growth of honors learning since his appointment to his University-wide coordinating post in 1974.

"We've rounded out the offerings," he said. "We now have enough of a variety that all able students can find an honors educational experience to meet their needs."

Arts and Sciences honors students Isabel and Leo Liu posed for this photograph at Phi Beta Kappa initiation after both brother and sister were elected last spring. Leo is majoring in comparative thought and literature and plans a medical career, perhaps in conjunction with law. Isabel, an international economics major, plans to study economics at a German university for a term this fall. She worked at a resort in Germany this summer while Leo studied language and culture in the same country under an academic enrichment award.

Constance Corrigan has little trouble reading the Russian newspaper Izvestia. She has designed an honors program major in Russian folklore and will continue language studies during an intensive 10-week course in Moscow autumn quarter. She also will do research for her senior honors thesis on the old Russian folktale "Slovo o polku Igoreve," or "The Song of Igor's Campaign," which is funded by a $900 Undergraduate Research Scholarship.

BILL MYLES

Bill Myles joined The Ohio State football staff in March of 1977 as coach of the offensive tackles and tight ends.

A native of Kansas City, Missouri, Myles graduated from Drake University in 1962 with a B.S. degree in education. As an undergraduate, he played center and linebacker for the Bulldogs.

After college, Myles started his coaching career as a high school assistant in Kansas City. His first opportunity to become a head coach came in 1965 at Lincoln High in Kansas City. In 1969 he was named head coach at Southeastern High, where he stayed three years. His seven-year record as a head coach in high school was 45-20-3.

While coaching at Lincoln High, Myles earned an M.S. degree from Central Missouri State in 1967.

In 1972 Myles went to the University of Nebraska as assistant freshman coach. The following year he advanced to varsity offensive line coach and in 1975 moved to defense as coach of the linebackers.

Myles is thoroughly schooled in football coaching techniques and has been identified with winning football programs both in high school and in college.

Bill and his wife, Lorita, have two children, daughter Debbie and son Billy.

"Some Ohio State alumni are farther from the 50-yard line than others."

But all have that same intense pride in Alma Mater that marks Buckeyes everywhere. That's why The Ohio State University Alumni Association—the official alumni organization—has more than 80,000 dues-paying members—and why it is the largest by far of all dues-paying alumni organizations in the world! Buckeyes grow everywhere—and the Alumni Association serves Buckeyes everywhere. Whether they're at the game today—or cheering at some distant spot, Ohio State's organized alumni have one overriding purpose: to help our Ohio State University.

Chevy Chevette

43<sup>MPG</sup> / 31<sup>MPG</sup>

EPA HIGHWAY EPA CITY ESTIMATE

Smile: You've just read the highest EPA estimates for any car built in America. Ever.

Chevy Chevette with available 1.6-litre engine and standard manual transmission.

EPA figures are estimates. The mileage you get will vary depending on your type of driving, driving habits, car's condition and available equipment. In California, EPA figures are lower.

And keep on smiling, there's more.

Chevette has more head room than many mid-size cars.

More horsepower this year.

A hatchback that opens up over 26 cu. ft. of carrying space.

One of the tightest turning circles of any car in the world.

A diagnostic connector for quick electronic service checks.

A service manual written for do-it-yourselfers.

A unitized body that's corrosion-protected.

And nearly 6,000 Chevy dealers everywhere.

If 43 and 31 are your kind of figures, stop by a Chevy dealer soon.

He has some more numbers you'll like too: Chevette's price.

It'll drive you happy.

Saban Returns To College Scene

Lou Saban's return to the college ranks as head football coach at the University of Miami Dec. 27, 1976 is just part of a lifelong pattern in which he has given rein to his innermost urge to achieve success not only for himself but for those whom he is directing.

This fall, at Miami, he will be sending a team into action in his 25th year of head coaching. Add to that two years of assistantship and he has a long and distinguished background. Over the years he has coached some of the greatest players in the game, his latest being the fabulous O. J. Simpson of the Buffalo Bills.

Saban is a leader, a teacher, an outstanding student of football, and a handler of men.

His long trail of head coaching jobs over the years included collegiate stints with Maryland and Northwestern among others — and in the pro ranks as boss of the Boston Patriots, the Denver Broncos, and two different stints with the Buffalo Bills. He came to University of Miami from the Bills.

It was Lou Saban who produced the AFL's first 1,000-yard rusher, fullback Cookie Gilchrist (1,098 yards) in 1962. He later developed two more — Floyd Little at Denver and the fabulous Simpson. Saban's 1973 Bills set a standard for rushing excellence unmatched in NFL annals when, triggered by Simpson's record 2,003-yard year, they became the first team in history to gain more than 3,000 yards on the ground.

Born on Oct. 13, 1921, in Brookfield, Ill., Saban was a single-wing quarterback at the University of Indiana under Bo McMillin. Captain of the Hoosiers, he was the team's MVP in 1942. His collegiate playing career was cut short by World War II. Saban served in the Army for four years, much of it as a Chinese language interpreter in the China-Burma theater.

Returning from service, Saban caught on as a free agent with the fledgling Cleveland Browns of the infant All-American Football Conference. He played linebacker for Paul Brown's powerhouse teams in the late 40's, appearing in four consecutive Conference championship games, and earning a berth on League all-star teams in both 1948-49.

Captain of the Browns' undefeated (14-0) 1948 squad, Saban intercepted 13 passes in his four-year playing career. In addition to linebacker, he was also Otto Graham's backup at quarterback although "thankfully," as Lou puts it, "Otto was able to play most of the time." Injuries to both shoulders forced Saban to retire following the 1949 season.

First stop on a coaching career that now spans 27 years was Case Institute in Cleveland where Saban directed the football program for three seasons (1950-52). He moved to the University of Washington as an assistant in 1953 and to Northwestern in the same capacity a year later. Named head coach of the Wildcats in 1955, Saban left Evanston after one season and spent the next year (1956) in private business.

Western Illinois University beckoned in 1957 and Saban accepted the assignment of rebuilding the Leathernecks football fortunes. He did it in dramatic fashion, taking Western from a 5-4 record in his rookie season to an unbeaten 9-0 mark in 1959.

His success at Western Illinois attracted the attention of the Boston Patriots, who selected Saban as the first coach of the new American Football League Club in 1960.

Ralph Wilson hired Lou as the Bills' Director of Player Personnel late in 1961 and, a year later (1962), gave him the Buffalo coaching job. The move paid off with AFL titles in 1964 and 1965; back-to-back "AFL Coach-of-the-Year" citations for Saban, and a flood of Buffalo victories.

A yearn to return to college coaching took Saban to Maryland in 1966 but, a year later, he was back in professional football as General Manager-Head Coach of the Denver Broncos. The Broncos stock rose steadily on the field and off under Saban's imaginative leadership. His effort was instrumental in a $1.8 million stadium renovation and his judgment of player personnel laid the foundations for the Broncos recent successes.

Lou remained at Denver through 1971, then returned to Buffalo as head coach in 1972, his last stop before coming to UM in December of 1976.

OSU's College of Social Work

Celebrating 50 years of excellence

Social Work at Ohio State is at the same time one of the oldest of such programs in the country and the University's newest college.

It will celebrate its 50th anniversary as a degree-granting unit of Ohio State this year, one of only 11 comprehensive programs in the nation that offers master's and doctoral degrees in addition to the baccalaureate.

"The college has probably graduated more executives of United Way and Community Fund programs than any other school in the country," said Dean Robert O. Washington. "It also is the major supplier of social work professionals in the state."

Social Work was a school in the College of Administrative Science until it was elevated to full college status July 1, 1976, becoming the 17th college of the university.

College status, says Dr. Washington, who came to his position as dean from one as associate dean of the School of Social Welfare at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, lends increased prestige to Ohio State's social work program.

But the college already "has an outstanding reputation as a social work school," Dr. Washington added. "Its graduates have made significant contributions to the fields of community organization, social planning and social work education."

And, says Dr. Washington, college status "affords us the latitude to be more relevant to the community at large and enables us to make some necessary changes coherent with the new thrust in social work."

Social work, he believes, is moving more and more away from a casework frame of reference, where professionals work as clinicians or therapists, to an aggressive, advocacy role, helping people develop skills to change for the better, not simply adapt to, their situations and environments.

Dr. Robert O. Washington, dean of the College of Social Work

Social work graduate student Herbert Smith questions a campus-area resident as part of a five-month assessment of social service needs in Columbus. The research is being conducted by the college under a contract with the Metropolitan Human Services Commission. Results will be used to advise the city, the county welfare department and United Way on effective use of social service funds.

Last year, the college awarded three doctoral, 11 master's and 155 bachelor's degrees to students entering a growing job market.

"The demand for social workers is a barometer of the increasing complexity of our society," Dr. Washington said. Far more students apply to the college's graduate programs than can be accepted, he said, an indication of the desirability of the social work professional.

Ohio State's program has pioneered in community organization and planning in its 50-year history. Today, it is embarked on an international project.

Dr. Washington is principal investigator for an 18-month social work study to assist the Egyptian government in developing an integrated human services delivery system. The first of three phases, to be funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development, will involve gathering and processing data so the Egyptian ministry of Social Affairs can identify the needs for human services ranging from housing to health care and child development.

Dr. Washington also is overseeing changes closer to home, including revision of bachelor's and master's degree level social work curricula and a $75,000 renovation of historic Stillman Hall, where the college offices are located.

The work should be complete in plenty of time for a 50th anniversary symposium, expected to draw social work professionals from across the country to Ohio State this spring. The conference is being organized by the college's alumni association.

     mighty cheer
 Rah! Rah! Rah!
 Hit them hard and see how they fall;
 Never let that team get the ball,
 Hail! Hail! the gang's all here,
 So let's win that old conference now.

CARMEN OHIO

Oh! Come let's sing Ohio's praise,
 And songs to Alma Mater raise;
 While our hearts rebounding thrill,
 With joy which death alone can still.
 Summer's heat or Winter's cold,
 The seasons pass, the years will roll;
 Time and change will surely show
 How firm thy friendship O-hi-o.

BUCKEYE BATTLE CRY

In old Ohio there's a team,
 That's known thru-out the land;
 Eleven warriors, brave and bold,
 Whose fame will ever stand,
 And when the ball goes over,
 Our cheers will reach the sky,
 Ohio Field will hear again
 The Buckeye Battle Cry —.

Drive! Drive on down the field,
 Men of the scarlet and gray;
 Don't let them thru that line,
 We have to win this game today,
 Come on, Ohio!
 Smash thru to victory
 We cheer you as we go:
 Our honor defend
 So we'll fight to the end for O Hi o.

The Kodak All-America Team

It's one of the oldest and smallest teams in college football. It doesn't have a win-loss record. It doesn't set rushing records, and it has never scored a touchdown. Yet, at the end of the 1977 season, the Kodak All-America Team will be the number one team in college football.

What this team will have is the 22 very best players of the season. Twenty-two men who have earned the right to be called All-American. No amount of popularity or publicity can put a player on this team if he doesn't deserve to be there. It is a distinction which is earned with outstanding ability, sportsmanship and leadership. And these players have to prove themselves to the toughest coaches of all, the American Football Coaches Association.

The Kodak All-America Team is the only team which represents the choice of the more than 2,000 college and university coaches who are the American Football Coaches Association. Their standards are exacting, for this is a team that for 88 years has included the greatest names in college football.

The 1977 Kodak All-America Team has yet to be selected. The field is large, for there are more than 12,000 players from which to choose. But when the season ends, a handful of men will have distinguished themselves, and earned the honor of being on the number one team in college football.

Serving labor's educational needs

More than 10,600 labor union members were reached last year by over 200 education programs offered statewide by the Ohio State University's Labor Education and Research Service (LERS).

It's all part of an Ohio State tradition in meeting the continuing educational needs of labor groups and individuals, says LERS director Dr. Charles J. Slanicka.

Programs were first offered in the Department of Economics after World War II by labor economists who believed workers were entitled to share the knowledge available at a land grant university, Dr. Slanicka said.

LERS was officially created in the College of Administrative Science in 1955-56. When regional offices opened in 1969 in Toledo, Cincinnati and Akron, numbers of participants began to increase dramatically, he said. Today, LERS is the largest labor education program in the country.

Programs can be anything from a weekend workshop to eight weeks of evening classes and range over subjects from arbitration procedures to labor history to steward training. Meetings are arranged around work schedules and held at facilities, including union halls, convenient to the participants.

"The idea is to take the university to the workers so that they can attend classes after work without traveling a great distance," Dr. Slanicka said.

Full-time faculty members in the regional and Columbus LERS offices work with labor leaders to develop needed programs.

"Together they review the variety of problems covering all aspects of collective bargaining and union administration," Dr. Slanicka said. "They determine what is needed to resolve the problems. With these goals in mind, the faculty can then design a tailor-made course or series of courses to fit the needs of the particular labor group."

LERS received a contract from the U.S. Department of Labor in 1974 to develop and teach a comprehensive program in occupational hazard recognition, now taught in construction safety, industrial safety and occupational health. The free program, the first of its kind, drew more than 5,000 participants in 1975-76.

Dr. Slanicka said LERS's work has been favorably received by trade unions. The Ohio AFL-CIO adopted a resolution at its 1976 convention supporting LERS and encouraging its members to take part in all of its continuing labor education programs.
